

Background:

Short term memory loss, attention and concentration problems, language problems, and academic problems often plague students with epilepsy. Board and card games are a fun, yet educational way, to help students develop and succeed in school. Games assist children in practicing cognitive skills and developing thought and memory formations. A few of their learning benefits include: logic and reasoning, spatial reasoning, and critical thinking.

Game Recommendations:

Card Games

- Go Fish
 - Benefits: Listening and Memory Skills
- Sleeping Queens
 - Benefits: Memory, Strategy, and Elementary Math Skills
- UNO
 - Benefits: Fine Motor Skills, Matching, and Strategy
- Spot It/Dobble
 - Benefits: Visual Perception and Matching
- Zingo
 - Benefits: Quick Thinking and Matching Skills
- Boggle and Boggle Junior
 - Benefits: Letters, Spelling, and Matching Skills

Board Games

- Sequence and Sequence for Kids
 - Benefits: Strategy, Categorization, and Memory, Vocabulary
- Q-bitz and Q-bitz Jr.
 - Benefits: Matching Skills, Spatial Reasoning, Problem Solving, and Visualization
- Memory Matching
 - Benefits: Memory, Matching Skills, Recognition, and Concentration

Board Games Continued

- Qwirkle
 - Benefits: Recognition and Strategy
- Checkers
 - Benefits: Concentration, Reasoning, Logical Thinking, and Strategy
- Chess
 - Benefits: Memory, Concentration, Reasoning, Logical Thinking, and Strategy
- Monopoly and Monopoly Junior
 - Benefits: Math, Color Recognition, Reading, Reasoning, Recognition, and Social Skills
- Scrabble and Scrabble Junior
 - Benefits: Literacy and Language Skills